

CALVERT LEARNING

For 112 years, Calvert has supported learning outside of traditional classroom settings and experiences. We love making a big difference for so many educators and families, and we always have. Calvert pioneered its curriculum and unique approach to education in 1906. Students who have learned with Calvert include Supreme Court justices, Pulitzer Prize winners, and thousands of people who have gained critical thinking skills essential for life. In recent years, we applied decades of experience and developed solutions for schools, specifically for K-8 virtual and blended learning. We also expanded capabilities for international schools. Supporting educators with curriculum, tools, and services is now our focus. Hundreds of schools around the world trust Calvert.

Calvert is a mission-based organization focused on students in nontraditional learning settings. These settings typically mean Calvert students learn outside of a classroom in a brick-and-mortar school, although there are strong use cases for blended learning as well. Generally, a Calvert student is learning with a Learning Guide, who is supported by a certified Calvert teacher. We believe that all students deserve a high-quality education, no matter where or when they learn. Calvert provides schools with:

- A trusted curriculum and framework with active, project-based learning at the core
- Services and support that ensure your success
- A flexible, modular approach tailored to the unique needs of your school/district

At Calvert, we believe learning is student-centric. We're obsessed with student success (and supporting teachers and families who make it happen). Learning is an ongoing process, and our curriculum develops skills that last a lifetime; and learning is an outcome. We're focused on delivering positive outcomes for students. These views reflect the commitment through the Calvert legacy that began over a century ago. Formerly known as Calvert Education, our curriculum, tools, and services are now only available through schools and districts. We take great pride in our long history of supporting homeschool families, and our program is available for homeschool students enrolled with one of our school partners.
